

DISPOSABLE BABY DIAPER

We use it when tattoos have lots of solid colors, so the whole surface is quite traumatized and “second skin” just can’t handle the amount of liquid that comes out in the first 12 hours after the tattoo session.

After the tattoo is done, we put Vaseline on it and wrap it with cling film and a paper towel. After 2 hours, remove the compress and wash the tattoo thoroughly with warm water and soap. Wash away any lymph and ink that has accumulated. Don’t rub it with your nails. Then apply a clean paper towel to the area and apply Dexpanthenol or Bepanthenol cream/ointment. Apply just enough, not too much. Make sure there are no towel pieces or other foreign objects on the tattoo, and keep it clean.

Close the tattoo with a disposable diaper and secure it with an adhesive patch to ensure it stays on the skin well. When applying the diaper to areas that move, be careful not to let the adhesive come off during stretching. Repeat this process before going to bed.

If you finish the tattoo in the evening with about 4 hours until bedtime, you can leave the diaper on until then and change it later.

Repeat this process the next day. Change the diaper every morning and evening for the next 2-3 days, with an interval of about 12 hours between each change.

HOW TO KNOW WHEN IT’S TIME TO STOP USING DIAPER?

Usually it takes 2-3 days for diaper. With each change, there will be less and less lymph and ink left on the diaper. When there are no traces left after the next change, it’s a good sign to stop using the diaper and start using Bepanthen, Dexpanthenol, or Bepanthen+. Apply the product sparingly, just enough to keep the area moist. Do this until the skin has completely healed, which should take about 5-7 days.

After that, continue using any moisturizing cream for another 1-2 weeks. Avoid sports for 5 days after tattoo session, contact sports for 2 weeks.

If a crust has formed somewhere on the tattoo, do not tear it off, no matter how much you would like it.

For the first 2 months, cover the tattoo from the sun, and if it is colored, then you should always do it. Suitable clothing or sunscreen.
